QUESTION FOR WRITTEN REPLY

QUESTION NO. 1485

Quality Standard Inspections at Factories

Mr H J Van den Berg (Northern Cape: FF Plus) to ask the Minister of Trade, Industry and Competition:

- (1) Whether the SA Bureau of Standards still conducts quality standard inspections at factories, especially manufacturers of (a) dog food, (b) cat food and (c) canned food such as tuna; if not, why not; if so, how often in each case;
- (2) Whether he will provide a list of factories that have been inspected in the past year; if not, why not; if so, (a) when and (b) what is the state of standards of production in South Africa? CW1703E

REPLY

I have been advised as follows.

- (1) (a) & (b)

The SABS and NRCS do not have the mandate to regulate dog and cat food. The mandate falls under the Department of Agriculture.

- (c)

The NRCS has a mandate to regulate canned food such as tuna, fish and canned meat. The following are the different factories that are regulated by the NRCS:

- (i) Canned Abalone Processing Factories
- (ii) Canned Fish Processing Factories

- (iii) Canned Meat Processing Factories
- (iv) Frozen Fish Processing Facilities including the tuna Factories
- (v) Live and Fresh Fish processing factories
- (vi) Live and Fresh Bivalve processing factories
- (vii) Processed Meat Factories

As per the NRCS regulations and compulsory specifications, all processing plants and fishing vessels need to be registered by the NRCS. The factories and fishing vessels are inspected annually and a compliance certificate is issued. Furthermore, the NRCS conducts unscheduled inspections to ensure continuous compliance.

All canned tuna sold in South Africa is imported and each imported canned tuna consignment is inspected and approved by the NRCS before the products are released for trade.

(2) (b)

The NRCS technical regulations are set in alignment with the International Codex Alimentarius Standards which are the minimum food safety requirements in terms of international trade. The South African factories are mainly compliant and the factories that are found non-compliant are immediately closed down.
